Timing

1. The time frame to submit your written exam is typically 6-8 weeks, but varies. You will set the timeframe with your adviser
2. Your adviser will return your paper(s) with an evaluation approximately 3 weeks after it was submitted

Written Exam

Take home exam. Typically two papers on topics related to your scholarly interests, 20-30 pages. Your adviser sets one question and another committee member sets the second.

If either paper results in a Deferred Pass, you will be notified of what is required to have the conditions removed.

If either paper results in a Fail, matriculation is suspended and you must request permission to rewrite the paper.

Revisions and second opportunities to write papers must be completed within the next academic term.

If you pass after revisions are made, doctoral status is restored; if you fail after revisions, matriculation in the doctoral program is terminated.

Oral Exam

You are required to share your written prelim papers with all members of your committee prior to the exam so that members will be familiar with your work.

This meeting is a conversation between you and committee members. Questions, concerns, and comments generated by your written exams are taken up in detail.

The second portion of the meeting will typically be forward-looking: exploring your research topics and possible approaches to future work, including preliminary plans for the written dissertation.
