

Request for Proposal:
First Generation Institute Microgrants

The First Generation Institute microgrants are an opportunity for members of the Twin Cities campus community to be awarded funding to support and advocate for the success and persistence of first-generation students.

In our inaugural year, the institute aims to provide funding and resources to encourage individuals or groups (departments, collegiate units, student groups, etc.) to work collaboratively on projects to enhance the campus climate for first-generation students. Grants will be awarded to support ongoing activities only if the proposal clearly demonstrates how funding is critical to ensure the continuation of the outlined activities or to significantly expand their scope and impact.

FUNDING PRIORITIES

Grants will be awarded to new projects that focus on one or more of these priorities:

1. Expanding visibility and understanding of first-generation students
2. Increasing equity and persistence of first-generation students
3. Improving institutional and community knowledge on first-generation students

Successful applications are those that can clearly articulate how their project/event/initiative will help to support and advocate for the equity and persistence of first-generation students relative to at least one of the above funding priorities.
