Clara Barton

Clara Barton was born on a farm in Oxford, Massachusetts in 1821. As a child, she wanted to help others. She treated pets that were hurt and cared for her brother who fell from a barn.

Clara was a teacher. She taught school for 14 years. She taught at a private school and was paid by the children's parents. It made her sad to see other children whose parents could not afford to pay a teacher. She offered to teach those children without pay. The town provided a place for her to teach, and she soon had 600 students!

The Civil War started. Clara wanted to help the soldiers. She asked people to give money to help. She made bandages out of sheets and towels for soldiers who were hurt.

She cared for many soldiers. People called her the Angel of the Battlefield. She almost lost her life in the war. Still, she kept working. She comforted the soldiers and made food for them. She searched for missing soldiers. After the Civil War, she helped many soldiers find their families again.

In 1881, Clara started the American Red Cross. At first, the Red Cross only helped soldiers in need. Later, Clara saw that other people needed help when there were floods, earthquakes, and other disasters.

The Red Cross still helps many people in need. We can learn from Clara's life. All her good work continued to help people for a long time.
